

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

EASTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON

BRYAN JACOBSON,

Plaintiff,

V.

WASHINGTON STATE UNIVERSITY, a State agency, the STATE OF WASHINGTON, and STEVEN J. HANSEN, a married man and his marital community,

Defendants.

No. CV-05-0092-FVS

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART DEFENDANTS'
MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

WASHINGTON STATE UNIVERSITY, a State agency, the STATE OF WASHINGTON, and STEVEN J. HANSEN, a married man and his marital community,

Defendants.

THIS MATTER came before the Court for a hearing on the Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment, Ct. Rec. 10, on December 18, 2006. The Plaintiff was represented by Patrick J. Kirby. The Defendants were represented by Holly A. Vance.

BACKGROUND

The Plaintiff, Bryan Jacobson, began working for Defendant Washington State University ("WSU") on April 27, 1990. During the times relevant to this action, Jacobson was the only African American employed at WSU's Public Safety Department ("the Department"). In either 1999 or 2000, he was promoted to the position of Police Sergeant.

During his employment at WSU, Jacobson allegedly spoke out against what he perceived as racial hostility and discrimination in

1 the Department. On July 18, 2000, Jacobson filed a law suit against 2 WSU, alleging racial discrimination and retaliation in violation of 3 the Washington Law Against Discrimination. The parties settled the 4 suit on March 13, 2001. The settlement agreement requires WSU to 5 provide an additional 40 hours of training in law enforcement and 6 diversity.

7 In November of 2000, WSU issued Jacobson an interest-free, non-8 revolving credit card. The card was to be used for work-related 9 travel only. The parties dispute the point in time at which Jacobson 10 became aware of this restriction. On December 9, 2003, J.P. Morgan 11 Chase notified WSU that Jacobson's account was 90 days past due. An 12 examination of Jacobson's account revealed that he had used his travel 13 card for personal purchases totaling $26,646.34. On June 7, 2004, 14 Defendant Steven J. Hansen, the Chief of Police for WSU's Public 15 Safety Department, discharged Jacobson on the grounds that he had used 16 his travel card inappropriately.

17 Jacobson appealed his dismissal to the Personnel Appeals Board 18 ("PAB"). The PAB held a hearing on May 17, 2005. During the 19 proceedings, Jacobson argued that he was discharged in retaliation for 20 his lawsuit against WSU and his subsequent attempt to enforce the 21 settlement agreement. In support of his retaliation claim, Jacobson 22 introduced evidence that persuaded the PAB that "there was uncertainty 23 regarding the normal practice of WSU travel card use prior to 2003, 24 and there was a common perception that it was acceptable to charge 25 personal items on the cards as long as the balance was paid."

26 On July 8, 2005, the PAB issued its Findings of Fact, Conclusions

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR
SUMMARY JUDGMENT- 2

1 of Law and Order of the Board. The PAB held that Jacobson's
2 unauthorized use of his card constituted neglect of duty and willful 3 violation of a published policy. The PAB also held that Jacobson had 4 not committed malfeasance or gross misconduct. Based on these 5 findings, the PAB concluded that the sanction of termination was too 6 severe and modified Jacobson's sanction to demotion to the position of 7 Police Officer.

8 In September of 2005, Chief Hansen took disciplinary measures 9 against four other Department employees who had made personal 10 purchases on their travel cards. Three employees received a reduction 11 in pay for a number of months, while a fourth employee received a 12 letter of reprimand. In September of 2006, Assistant Chief Scott West 13 also received a letter of reprimand.

14 On May 24, 2006, Jacobson filed the present suit, alleging six 15 causes of action: 1) retaliation in violation of Washington's Law
16 Against Discrimination ("LAD") and Title VII of the Civil Rights Act 17 of 1964 ("Title VII"); 2) wrongful discharge in violation of public 18 policy; 3) negligent retention and supervision; 4) negligent 19 infliction of emotional distress; 5) outrage; and 6) a 42 U.S.C. § 20 1983 claim alleging deprivation of civil rights. The Plaintiff seeks 21 to recover lost wages, special damages, general damages for emotional 22 distress, his costs and attorney's fees, punitive damages, and 23 prejudgment interest.

24 DISCUSSION

25 I. SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION

26 The Plaintiff alleges two federal causes of action and four state

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT- 3

1 causes of action. The Plaintiff's federal claims arise under 42
 2 U.S.C. § 2000e-3 and 42 U.S.C. § 1983. This Court has jurisdiction to 3 hear these two claims pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1331.

4 The Court has discretion to exercise supplemental jurisdiction
 5 over the Plaintiff's four state law claims pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 6 1337. Section 1337 provides that, when a federal district court has 7 subject matter jurisdiction over a claim, the court may also grant 8 "supplemental jurisdiction over all other claims that are so related 9 to claims in the action within such original jurisdiction that they 10 form part of the same case or controversy under Article III." In this 11 case, the Plaintiff's state law claims form part of the same case or 12 controversy as the Plaintiff's Title VII and Section 1983 claims 13 because all claims are based on the Plaintiff's discharge and the 14 Defendants' treatment of other officers who similarly misused their 15 travel cards.

16 II. APPLICABLE LAW

17 A federal district court sitting in diversity must apply the 18 substantive law of the forum state. Gasperini v. Center for Humanities, Inc., 518 U.S. 415, 426-427, 116 S. Ct. 2211, 2219, 135 L.
 19 Ed. 2d 659, 673 (1996); Erickson v. Desert Palace, Inc., 942 F.2d 694, 20 695 (9th Cir 1991) (citing Erie R.R. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 58 21 S.Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188 (1938)). A federal court exercising 22 supplemental jurisdiction over a state law claim must apply the law of 23 the forum state just as it would if it were sitting in diversity.
 24 Mangold v. California Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 67 F.3d 1470 (9th Cir.
 25 1995). This Court accordingly applies Washington law to the 1 Plaintiff's state law claims.

2 When called upon to determine the preclusive effect of a state
 3 administrative decision, federal district courts apply state law 4 standards of res judicata.<sup>1</sup> Northwest Sea Farms, Inc. v. United 5 States Army Corps of Eng'r, 931 F. Supp. 1515, 1522 (W.D. Wash. 1996).
 6 Federal courts give the factual findings of state agencies the same 7 preclusive effect the findings would be given in the state's own 8 courts when the agency, "acting in a judicial capacity resolves 9 disputed issues of fact properly before it which the parties have had 10 an adequate opportunity to litigate." Univ. of Tenn. v. Elliot, 478
 11 U.S. 788, 799, 106 S. Ct. 3220, 3226, 92 L. Ed. 2d 635, 646
 12 (1986) (internal quotation marks omitted); Olson v. Morris, 188 F.3d 13 1083, 1086 (9th Cir. 1999). As a matter of federal common law, 14 district courts also apply the law of preclusion articulated in Elliot 15 to an administrative agency's legal conclusions. Wherli v. County of 16 Orange, 175 F.3d 692, 694 (9th Cir. 1999).

17 III. SUMMARY JUDGMENT STANDARD

18 A moving party is entitled to summary judgment when there are no 19 genuine issues of material fact in dispute and the moving party is 20 entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56; Celotex
21 Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323, 106 S.Ct. 2548, 2552, 91 L. Ed.

22 2d 265, 273-274 (1986). "A material issue of fact is one that affects 23 the outcome of the litigation and requires a trial to resolve the

---

24

25 <sup>1</sup>The term "res judicata" encompasses both the doctrine of 26 claim preclusion and the doctrine of issue preclusion.
Christensen v. Grant County Hosp. Dist., 96 P.3d 957, 961 n. 3 (Wash. 2004).

1 parties' differing versions of the truth." S.E.C. v. Seaboard Corp., 2 677 F.2d 1301, 1306 (9th Cir. 1982).

3 Initially, the party moving for summary judgment bears the burden 4 of showing that there are no issues of material fact for trial.
 5 Celotex, 477 U.S. at 317. Where the moving party does not bear the 6 burden of proof at trial, it may satisfy this burden by pointing out 7 that there is insufficient evidence to support the claims of the 8 nonmoving party. Id. at 325.

9 If the moving party satisfies its burden, the burden then shifts 10 to the nonmoving party to show that there is an issue of material fact 11 for trial. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e), Celotex, 477 U.S. at 324. There is 12 no issue for trial "unless there is sufficient evidence favoring the 13 non-moving party for a jury to return a verdict for that party."
 14 Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 249, 106 S.Ct. 2505, 15 2511, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 212 (1986). Conclusory allegations alone will 16 not suffice to create an issue of material fact. Hansen v. United 17 States, 7 F.3d 137, 138 (9th Cir. 1993). Rather, the non-moving party 18 must present admissible evidence showing there is a genuine issue for 19 trial. Fed. R. Civ. Fed. R Civ. P. 56(e); Brinson v. Linda Rose Joint 20 Venture, 53 F.3d 1044, 1049 (9th Cir. 1995).

21 V. RETALIATION UNDER THE LAW AGAINST DISCRIMINATION

22 In order to state a prima facie case of retaliatory discharge 23 under Washington law, a plaintiff must establish three elements: 1) 24 that he or she engaged in a protected activity; 2) that he or she was 25 discharged; and 3) that "retaliation was a substantial factor behind 26 the discharge." Vasquez v. State, 974 P.2d 348, 353 (Wash. Ct. App.

1 1999); Hines v. Todd Pac. Shipyards Corp., 112 P.3d 522, 530-31 (Wash.
2 Ct. App. 2005).

3 The Plaintiff alleges that the Defendants terminated his 4 employment in retaliation for the Plaintiff's complaints about WSU's
5 treatment of minorities and the LAD suit he filed in 2000. Complaint 6 ¶ 22. As evidence, the Plaintiff relies on his allegation that he was 7 treated more harshly than the many other Department employees who used 8 their cards for personal purchases.

9 The Defendants argue that the doctrine of collateral estoppel 10 bars the Plaintiff's retaliation claims. Collateral estoppel, also 11 referred to as "issue preclusion," bars the relitigation of a factual 12 issue that has been previously decided in a proceeding between the 13 same parties. Christensen, 96 P.3d at 960-61. Though frequently 14 confused with the related doctrine of claim preclusion, collateral 15 estoppel is distinct from claim preclusion in that it applies even 16 where a new cause of action has been asserted in the later proceeding.
17 Id.

18 Under Washington law, collateral estoppel applies when four 19 elements are present. First, the issue decided in the earlier 20 proceeding must be identical to the issue at stake in the later 21 proceeding. Second, the earlier proceeding must have concluded with a 22 judgment on the merits. Third, the party against whom collateral 23 estoppel is asserted must have been a party to the earlier proceeding.
24 Finally, the application of collateral estoppel must not work an 25 injustice on the party against whom it is asserted. Id. at 961. The 26 party asserting collateral estoppel bears the burden of proof. Smith

v. State, 144 P.3d 331 (Wash. Ct. App. 2006).

Collateral estoppel applies to factual findings made by state administrative agencies. Christensen, 96. P.3d at 961. Washington courts consider three additional factors before applying collateral estoppel to agency findings: first, whether the agency acted within its competence, second, the differences between procedures in the administrative proceeding and court procedures, and third, public policy considerations. Id. at 961-62.

According to the Defendants, all of the necessary factors are present in the Plaintiff's retaliation claim. First, according to the Defendants, the PAB determined that Jacobson was discharged because of his improper use of his government credit card. Second, the PAB decision resulted in a final determination on the merits. Third, Jacobson was a party to the PAB proceedings. Fourth, the Defendants argue that it would not be unfair to bar Jacobson's claims on the basis of collateral estoppel because he took full advantage of the procedures available in presenting his claim to the PAB. He also had the opportunity to appeal. The Defendants do not address the three additional factors that must be considered before administrative findings will be given preclusive effect.

The Plaintiff makes four arguments in support of his position that collateral estoppel does not bar his retaliation claim. First, the Plaintiff argues that the issues before the PAB and those before this Court are not identical. Second, the Plaintiff argues that applying collateral estoppel to his retaliation claim would work an injustice. Third, the Plaintiff argues that new evidence precludes

1 the application of collateral estoppel to his retaliation claim.

2 Fourth, the Plaintiff argues that the PAB was<sup>2</sup> not competent to decide 3 his retaliation claim under the LAD. The Plaintiff does not contest
 4 that Jacobson was a party to the PAB proceedings or that the PAB 5 proceeding resulted in a final decision on the merits.

6 A. Identity of Issues

7 The Court finds that the issues before the PAB and this Court are 8 identical. Jacobson presented his retaliation argument to the PAB and 9 the PAB concluded "there is no evidence to substantiate Appellant's 10 claim that he was treated differently." Def.'s Ex. 2 ¶ 2.20. Given 11 that the Plaintiff relies upon this alleged disparate treatment to 12 prove the third element of his retaliation claim, the PAB's finding is 13 fatal to his retaliation claim.

14 Jacobson argued his retaliation claim at some length before the 15 PAB. His retaliation claim was the central theme of Mr. Kirby's 16 opening statement at the PAB hearing, as Mr. Kirby commenced and 17 concluded his opening statement with the argument, "This case is 18 simply about using a convenient opportunity to discharge a police 19 officer who has exercised his civil rights." Def.'s Ex. 3 at 44.
 20 Through his cross examination of WSU witnesses, Jacobson sought to 21 prove that many other employees similarly misused their travel cards 22 and received less severe penalties. Jacobson questioned multiple 23 witnesses about the use of travel cards by other officers for personal 24 purchases, the Department's knowledge of this practice, and the

---

25       <sup>2</sup>Since January 1, 2006, actions formerly appealed to the PAB 26 have been appealed to the personnel resources board. 2006-03
 Wash. Reg. 70 (Feb. 1 2006).

1 disciplinary actions taken in response to travel card misuse by other 2 officers. Def.'s Ex. 3 at 183-205, 317-339.

3 The PAB considered and rejected the evidence of disparate 4 treatment. In its Order of July 8, 2005, the PAB noted that Jacobson, 5 "raise[d] the argument of retaliation based on a lawsuit he filed 6 against WSU for racial discrimination in 2000 because others who used 7 their credit cards for personal purposes were not disciplined." 8 Def.'s Ex. 2 ¶ 2.20. In its Findings of Fact, the PAB found the 9 Plaintiff's argument was unsubstantiated by the evidence, explaining,

10 Appellant never provided Chief Hansen with any names of 11 employees engaging in similar misconduct. Therefore, Chief 12 Hansen did not have direct knowledge regarding other employees' personal use at the time he imposed Appellant's disciplinary action.

13 Id.

14 B. Injustice

15 Under Washington law, "the injustice component is generally 16 concerned with procedural, not substantive, irregularity."
Christensen, 96 P.3d at 309. Thus, the application of collateral 17 estoppel may result in injustice when the earlier proceeding was "an 18 informal, expedited hearing with relaxed evidentiary standards." Id.
 The application of collateral estoppel may also be inappropriate where 20 the relief available in the earlier proceeding was so disparate from 21 that available in the present proceeding that "a party would be 22 unlikely to have vigorously litigated the crucial issues in the first 23 forum." Id.

25 The Court finds that applying collateral estoppel to the Plaintiff's retaliation claim would not work an injustice under

1 Washington law. As the Defendants have observed, the Plaintiff 2 enjoyed procedural protections in the PAB hearing that are similar to 3 those available in a court proceeding. The Plaintiff was represented 4 by counsel, introduced exhibits, presented testimony from witnesses, 5 and cross-examined WSU's witnesses. The Plaintiff has not suggested 6 that he lacked motivation to try his claims vigorously before the PAB 7 and the almost five hundred pages of transcript of the hearing suggest 8 that he did, in fact, pursue his claim vigorously.

9 The Plaintiff's argument that WSU presented false evidence to the 10 PAB does not demonstrate unfairness. The Plaintiff is arguing, in 11 essence, that the PAB erred in relying on WSU's evidence. As the 12 Defendant observes, if the Plaintiff wished to relitigate the PAB's 13 decision, he could have appealed the PAB's decision directly rather 14 than bringing a separate action in this Court.

15 The Plaintiff's argument that the PAB did not address the 16 knowledge of any officer other than Hansen is likewise unavailing.
17 While the PAB cited Chief Hansen's lack of direct knowledge as the 18 reason for its rejection of the Plaintiff's retaliation argument, 19 Jacobson questioned other WSU officers about their knowledge of travel
20 card misuse. Had the Plaintiff convinced the PAB that other WSU 21 personnel were aware of the widespread misuse of travel cards, the 22 PAB's factual finding on the Plaintiff's retaliation argument would 23 have been phrased differently.

24 C. New Evidence of Disparate Treatment

25 Persuasive authority suggests that collateral estoppel does not 26 apply to any claim based on facts that did not arise until after the initial proceeding. Shaw v. Cal Dep't of Alcoholic Beverage Control, 788 F.2d 600, 606-607 (9th Cir. 1986); Gametech Internat'l, Inc., v. Trend Gaming Sys., LLC, 264 F. Supp. 2d 906, 911. Based on this authority, the Plaintiff argues that the disparity between his termination and the disciplinary measures imposed after the PAB hearing on five other employees constitutes new evidence that precludes application of collateral estoppel.

The Court does not find this argument persuasive. Neither of the decisions cited by the Plaintiff apply Washington law: Shaw applies California law, and Gametech applies Arizona law. In addition, the claims in Shaw and Gametech were both based on conduct that did not occur until after the termination of the prior proceeding. In contrast, the conduct underlying the Plaintiff's retaliation claim is his discharge. The allegedly disparate treatment of the Plaintiff is evidence presented for the purpose of illustrating the motive for his discharge. New evidence of disparate treatment is therefore just that: new evidence about conduct that has already been ruled upon. Most importantly, the transcript of the PAB hearing illustrates that the Plaintiff did present substantial evidence of disparate treatment to the PAB. The PAB was apparently unconvinced by the evidence, and it is not for this Court to question the PAB's finding.

4. PAB Competence to Determine Retaliation Issue

The PAB is generally competent to decide all employee defenses. The Washington Court of Appeals has held, "the PAB has authority to consider all defenses raised by an employee in an appeal of a disciplinary matter, so long as the appeal is properly before the PAB." Goodman v. Employment Sec. Dep't, 847 P.2d 29, 31 (Wash. Ct. App. 1993). The Supreme Court of Washington more recently held that the Public Employment Relations Commission ("PERC"), the agency charged with resolving labor disputes, was "competent to decide factual issues raised in unfair labor practices complaints, such as a claim of discharge in retaliation for engaging in union activity." Christensen, 96 P. 3d at 968. By analogy, it appears that the PAB, as the agency formerly charged with hearing appeals from suspended employees, is competent to decide factual issues concerning "any properly supported defense that an employee asserts to a disciplinary action." Goodman, at 103-04. The Washington case law the Defendants rely upon does not refute this point, as it deals with the issue of claim preclusion rather than issue preclusion. See Christensen, 96 P.3d at 967-968.

Accordingly, the Court holds that the PAB's determinations have preclusive effect upon the Plaintiff's LAD claim.

VII. RETALIATION UNDER TITLE VII

In order to state a prima facie case of retaliatory discharge under Title VII, a plaintiff must establish 1) that he or she engaged in a protective activity opposing an unlawful employment practice, 2) that he or she suffered an adverse employment action, and 3) the existence of "a causal link between the protected activity and the adverse action." Raad v. Fairbanks N. Star Borough, 323 F.3d 1185, 1196-97 (9th Cir. 2003); Fritag v. Ayers, 468 F.3d 528, 541 (9th Cir. 2006).

The Defendants argue that the Plaintiff's Title VII claim is

1 unavailing for two reasons. First, the Defendants argue that the 2 Title VII claim is barred by collateral estoppel for the same reasons 3 that the LAD claim is barred. Second, the Defendants argue that the 4 Plaintiff's protected activity occurred too long before his discharge 5 to establish the necessary causal link. Noting that timing is an 6 "important element" in assessing causation, the Defendants observe 7 that the Plaintiff engaged in protected conduct by filing a lawsuit in 8 2000 and filing complaints with the Center for Human Rights ("CHR") in 9 1992 and 1998.

10 A. Collateral Estoppel

11 Legislative intent may preclude the application of collateral 12 estoppel to causes of action created by statute. Christensen, 96 P.3d 13 at 964. This is the case with Title VII claims, as both the Supreme 14 Court and the Ninth Circuit have held that unreviewed factual findings 15 of administrative agencies do not have preclusive effect on court 16 actions subsequently brought under Title VII. Elliot, 478 U.S. at 17 795; McInnes v. California, 943 F.2d 1088, 1093-94 (9th Cir. 1991).
18 Accordingly, the Court holds that the Plaintiff's Title VII claim is 19 not barred by collateral estoppel.

20 B. Insufficient Evidence of Causal Nexus

21 In order to state a prima facie case of retaliation under Title 22 VII, an employee must prove the existence of a causal link between his 23 protected activity and his or her discharge. Raad, 323 F.3d at 1196-24 97. An employee may satisfy the causal link element by introducing 25 evidence of temporal proximity between protected conduct and 26 discharge, evidence that the employer expressed opposition to employee

1 speech, or evidence that the "employer's proffered explanations for 2 the adverse employment action were false and pre-textual." Id. at 3 977.

4 The Defendants' suggestion that the length of time between the 5 Plaintiff's protected conduct and his discharge creates a presumption 6 against wrongful conduct is unpersuasive for two reasons. First, in 7 the cases cited by the Defendants, the plaintiffs relied upon temporal 8 proximity alone to establish causation. In the present case, the 9 Plaintiff alleges that the more lenient disciplinary actions imposed 10 on other employees who engaged in similar misconduct demonstrate that 11 his discharge was retaliatory.

12 Second, the Defendants' argument presupposes that the passage of 13 a certain amount of time negates the element of causation. The Ninth 14 Circuit has expressly rejected this sort of bright line rule:

15 There is no set time beyond which acts cannot support an 16 inference of retaliation, and there is no set time within 17 which acts necessarily support an inference of retaliation.
 18 [ . . . ] the length of time, considered without regard to its 19 factual setting, is not enough by itself to justify a grant 20 of summary judgment

21 Coszalter v. City of Salem, 320 F.3d 968, 978 (9th Cir. 2003).

22 The Plaintiff's Title VII claim therefore survives summary 23 judgment.

24 V. Wrongful Discharge

25 In order to state a prima facie case of wrongful discharge in 26 violation of public policy under Washington law, the Plaintiff must prove three elements.

The plaintiff must prove (1) the existence of a clearly mandated public policy (the clarity element); (2) that discouraging the plaintiff's conduct would jeopardize that

1                   public policy (the jeopardy element); and (3) that the 2 plaintiff's public policy-linked conduct was the reason for 3 the dismissal (the causation element).

4                   Gaspar v. Pschastin Hi-Up Growers, 129 P.3d 627, 630 (Wash. Ct. App.
 5 2006). See also Fosmo v. State Dept of Personnel, 59 P.2d 105, 107
 (Wash. Ct. App. 2002).

6                   Collateral estoppel bars the Plaintiff's wrongful discharge 7 claim. As with the Plaintiff's retaliation claim, the Plaintiff 8 relies upon the more lenient treatment of other officers to prove the 9 motive underlying his discharge. The PAB's determination that the 10 Plaintiff was not treated differently precludes the Plaintiff from 11 satisfying the causation element of his wrongful discharge claim.

12                  The Court is not persuaded by the Plaintiff's argument that 13 courts may not apply collateral estoppel to wrongful discharge claims 14 based on findings of the PAB. In making this argument, the Plaintiff 15 relies upon the Washington Court of Appeals' decision in Vargas v.
 16 State, 65 P.3d 330 (Wash. Ct. App. 2003). The Supreme Court of 17 Washington discredited the Vargas opinion in Christensen, explaining 18 that the Vargas court confused the doctrine of issue preclusion with 19 that of claim preclusion. An administrative agency may be incompetent 20 to rule upon a common law tort claim and yet still be competent to 21 decide a factual issue necessary to prove an element of that tort 22 claim. 96 P.3d at 967 n.11.

23                  The Court holds that the PAB's determinations have preclusive
 24 effect upon the Plaintiff's wrongful discharge claim.

25                  VI. SECTION 1983

26                  Any person who deprives an American citizen of his or her civil rights under color of law may be held liable for injuries that result from the deprivation. 42 U.S.C. § 1983. The Plaintiff alleges that the Defendants deprived him of his First Amendment rights by discharging him in retaliation for "speaking out" against alleged racial hostility and discrimination within the Department and for filing the 2000 suit under the LAD. In order to prevail upon this claim, the Plaintiff must prove that he engaged in protected speech, that the Defendants took an adverse employment action against him, and that his protected speech was a "substantial or motivating factor" for the adverse employment action. Thomas v. City of Beaverton, 379 F.3d 802, 808 (9th Cir. 2004).

The Defendants argue that the Section 1983 claim should be dismissed for three reasons. First, the Defendants argue that they are absolutely immune to suit under Section 1983. Second, the Defendants argue that, even if Chief Hansen is not absolutely immune to suit, he is protected by qualified immunity. Finally, the Defendants argue that collateral estoppel bars the Section 1983 claim.

A. Absolute Immunity

Neither a state agency nor a state official acting in his or her official capacity is a "person" subject to a suit for damages under Section 1983. Will v. Michigan Dep't of State Police, 491 U.S. 58, 64, 109 S. Ct. 2304, 2308, 105 L. Ed. 2d 45, 52 (1989); Lapides v. Bd. of Regents, 535 U.S. 613, 617, 122 S. Ct. 1640, 1642, 152 L. Ed. 806, 811 (2002); Bank of Lake Tahoe v. Bank of America, 318 F.3d 914, 918 (9th Cir. 2003). Public universities, as state instrumentalities, are likewise immune to suit under Section 1983. Thompson v. City of Los

1       Angeles, 885 F.2d 1439, 1442 (9th Cir. 1989). While public officials 2       enjoy immunity for actions taken in their official capacity, public 3       officials sued in their individual capacities are persons subject to 4       suit under Section 1983. Hafer v. Melo, 502 U.S. 21, 30, 112 S. Ct.
 5       358, 363, 116 L. Ed. 2d 301, 313 (1991).

6           Both the State of Washington and WSU are absolutely immune to the 7       Plaintiff's Section 1983 claim. The Plaintiff acknowledges that WSU
 8       is a "state agency." The Plaintiff is seeking to recover only 9       damages, rather than injunctive relief, from the State and WSU. The 10      Plaintiff's Section 1983 claims against the State and WSU must 11      accordingly be dismissed.

12       Chief Hansen, however, does not enjoy absolute immunity from suit 13      under Section 1983 for actions taken in his individual capacity. The 14      Defendants argue that Chief Hansen should be absolutely immune 15      because, at all times relevant to this lawsuit, he was acting in his 16      official capacity. However, the Supreme Court has explicitly rejected 17      this argument, explaining, "the phrase 'acting in their official 18      capacities' is best understood as a reference to the capacity in which 19      the state officer is sued, not the capacity in which the officer 20      inflicts the alleged injury." Hafer, 502 U.S. at 27. The Plaintiff 21      in the present action has named Chief Hanson in his individual 22      capacity. Chief Hansen therefore does not enjoy absolute immunity.

23           B. Qualified Immunity

24       Under the doctrine of qualified immunity, government officials 25      are immune from civil liability for performing discretionary functions 26      unless their actions violate "clearly established statutory or

1 constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known."
 2 Morgan v. Morgensen, 465 F.3d 1041, 1044 (9th Cir. 2006) (citing Harlow
 3 v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 818, 102 S. Ct. 2727, 73 L. Ed. 2d 396, 4 410 (1982)). Determining whether an official is entitled to qualified 5 immunity entails a two step process. First, the Court must determine 6 whether the facts alleged by the Plaintiff "show the officer's conduct 7 violated a constitutional right[.]" Saucier v. Katz, 533 U.S. 194, 8 201-02, 121 S. Ct. 2151, 2156, 150 L. Ed. 2d 272, 281 (2001).
 9 Second, the Court must determine whether the right in question was 10 clearly established such that a reasonable officer would know his or 11 her conduct was unlawful. Saucier, 533 U.S. at 202; Morgan, 465 F.3d 12 at 1044. The Plaintiff bears the burden of proving that the right was 13 clearly established. DiRuzza v. County of Tehama, 206 F.3d 1304, 1313 14 (9th Cir. 2000).

15 In this case, the Plaintiff alleges that Chief Hansen discharged 16 him in retaliation for his First Amendment activities. The Defendants 17 argue that Chief Hansen is entitled to qualified immunity because he 18 considered a number of factors prior to discharging the Plaintiff and 19 several other officers agreed with him that termination was the 20 appropriate sanction for the Plaintiff's misuse of his travel card.

21 The Defendants misunderstand the standard for qualified immunity.
 22 On a motion for summary judgment, the Court must assume that all 23 disputed facts will be resolved in favor of the nonmoving party.
 24 Saucier, 533 U.S. at 201-02. Assuming, as the Plaintiff alleges, that 25 Chief Hansen discharged the Plaintiff in retaliation for his speech, 26 this action would violate the Plaintiff's First Amendment rights.

1 This satisfies the first step noted above.

2 Turning to the second step of the inquiry, the right to be free 3 from retaliation for First Amendment activities was clearly 4 established at the time Chief Hansen discharged the Plaintiff. The 5 Ninth Circuit has held, "as early as 1983, it could hardly be disputed 6 that [. . .] an individual had a clearly established right to be free 7 of intentional retaliation by government officials based upon that 8 individual's constitutionally protected expression." Soranno's Gasco, 9 Inc. v. Morgan, 874 F.2d 1310, 1319 (9th Cir. 1989). See also 10 DiRuzza, 206 F.3d at 1313; Hyland v. Wonder, 117 F.3d 405, 410 (9th 11 Cir. 1997). Accordingly, Chief Hansen is not entitled to qualified 12 immunity.

13       C. Collateral Estoppel

14       In applying the doctrine of collateral estoppel, the Court 15 considers whether the findings of the PAB preclude the Plaintiff from 16 proving any of the required elements of his Section 1983 claim. The 17 Plaintiff argues, and the Defendants do not dispute, that the 18 Plaintiff's complaints about racial discrimination and his 2000 19 lawsuit under the LAD constitute protected speech. Nor have the 20 Defendants disputed that discharging the Plaintiff constituted an 21 adverse employment action. Rather, the Defendants' argument suggests 22 that the PAB's findings preclude the Plaintiff from proving that his 23 First Amendment activities were a substantial or motivating factor in 24 his discharge.

25       The PAB premised its rejection of the Plaintiff's retaliation
 26 claim on its finding that the evidence did not support the Plaintiff's

1 contention that he was treated differently from other employees who 2 similarly misused their travel cards. While the Plaintiff has not 3 explicitly indicated that his Section 1983 claim is premised upon such 4 disparate treatment, he has made the same arguments concerning the 5 application of collateral estoppel to his Section 1983 claim as he has 6 for his retaliation and wrongful discharge claims, both of which rely 7 upon the alleged disparate treatment. As the Plaintiff is precluded 8 from arguing that he was treated differently from other employees, the 9 PAB's ruling precludes him from satisfying the third element of his 10 Section 1983 claim. The Section 1983 claim must accordingly be 11 dismissed.

12 VII. NEGLIGENT SUPERVISION AND RETENTION

13 An employer may be held liable for the negligent hiring, 14 retention, or supervision of an employee when two elements are 15 present. First, the plaintiff must show that the employer knew, or 16 should have known by exercising ordinary care, that the employee was 17 unfit. Second, the plaintiff must show that retaining or failing to 18 supervise the employee was a proximate cause of the plaintiff's 19 injuries. Betty Y. v. Al-hellou, 988 P.2d 1031, 1032-33 (Wash. Ct.
20 App. 1999); Crisman v. Pierce County Fire Prot. Dist. No. 21, 60 P.3d 21 652, 654 (2002).

22 The Plaintiff alleges that WSU was negligent in retaining and 23 failing to investigate Chief Hansen. The Defendants argue that the 24 Plaintiff's negligent retention and supervision claim is barred by 25 collateral estoppel because the PAB found that Chief Hansen did not 26 discharge the Plaintiff for a discriminatory purpose.

1       While the Defendants' argumentation on this point is far from 2 clear, the Court finds that collateral estoppel bars the Plaintiff's 3 negligent retention and supervision claim. As explained above, the 4 Plaintiff must prove that Chief Hansen was somehow "unfit" for his 5 position in order to state a claim of negligent retention and 6 supervision. Given that the PAB's findings preclude the Plaintiff 7 from arguing that Chief Hansen treated him differently from other 8 employees, discharged him in retaliation for his First Amendment 9 conduct, or discharged him in violation of public policy, there is no 10 remaining basis for the Plaintiff's negligent supervision and 11 retention claim.<sup>3</sup>

12       VIII. OUTRAGE

13       The tort of outrage, also referred to as "intentional infliction 14 of emotional distress," has three elements in the state of Washington.
 15 Orin v. Barclay, 272 F.3d 1207, 1219 (9th Cir 2001). First, the 16 plaintiff must demonstrate that the defendant engaged in "extreme and 17 outrageous" conduct. Second, the plaintiff must prove that the 18 defendant intentionally or recklessly inflicted emotional distress on 19 the plaintiff. Third, the plaintiff must prove that the defendant's 20 actions actually resulted in "severe emotional distress." Id.

21       The Defendants argue that the Plaintiff's outrage claim should be 22 dismissed for two reasons. First, the Defendants argue that the 23 Plaintiff's outrage claim is duplicative of the Plaintiff's civil

---

24
 25       <sup>3</sup>The considerations of legislative intent that exempt the 26 Plaintiff's Title VII claim from the preclusive effects of the PAB's decision do not apply to a common law tort claim such as negligent retention and supervision.

1 rights claims. Second, the Defendants' argue that the Plaintiff's 2 outrage claim is barred by the doctrine of claim preclusion.

3 A. Duplication

4 A claim is duplicative and must be dismissed under Washington 5 law when the plaintiff asserts the same factual basis for two claims.
6 Washington courts have dismissed both negligent infliction of 7 emotional distress and outrage claims as duplicative of discrimination
8 claims. See Francom v. Costco Wholesale Corp., 991 P.2d 1182, 1192
9 (Wash. Ct. App. 2000) (dismissing negligent infliction of emotional 10 distress claim as duplicative of LAD claim); Anaya v. Graham, 950 P.2d 11 16, 596 (Wash. Ct. App. 1998) (dismissing outrage claim as 12 duplicative).

13 The Court is not persuaded that the Plaintiff's outrage claim is 14 duplicative of the Plaintiff's civil rights claims. As the Plaintiff 15 argues, the outrage claim is based on a different set of facts from 16 his retaliation and wrongful discharge claims. The Plaintiff's 17 retaliation and wrongful discharge claims are based on the Defendants' 18 decision to discharge the Plaintiff. In contrast, the Plaintiff's 19 outrage claim is based upon the Defendants' alleged failure to 20 investigate other employees. Dismissal of the Plaintiff's outrage 21 claim on the basis of retaliation is therefore inappropriate.

22 B. Claim Preclusion

23 The doctrine of claim preclusion bars the relitigation of claims 24 that were or should have been decided in a prior proceeding between 25 the same parties. Roberson v. Perez, 123 P.3d 844, 848 (Wash. 2005).
26 Claim preclusion applies not only to claims that were actually litigated in a prior proceeding, but also claims that "could have been raised, and in the exercise of reasonable diligence should have been raised." DeYoung v. Cenex Ltd., 1 P.3d 587, 591 (Wash. Ct. App. 2004). A claim is not barred by claim preclusion if it could not have been litigated earlier. Kelly-Hansen v. Kelly-Hansen, 941 P.2d 1108, 1113-1114 (Wash. Ct. App. 1997).

The Defendants argue that the Plaintiff is barred from raising his emotional distress claims in the present suit because he could have raised them before the PAB. However, the Defendant has neither explained why, nor cited to any authority indicating, that the Plaintiff could have brought his emotional distress tort claims before the PAB. The purpose and responsibilities of the PAB suggest that it was not the appropriate forum for such tort claims. The purpose of the PAB was to "provide a system of adjudication of appeals for eligible state employees." Wash. Admin. Code 358-01-053. Its responsibilities included hearing appeals from state employees who had been "reduced, dismissed, suspended, or demoted." Wash. Admin. Code 35801-031. See also Wash. Rev. Code. § 41.06.170.

X. NEGIGENT INFILCTION OF EMOTIONAL DISTRESS

The tort of negligent infliction of emotional distress has five elements in the state of Washington. First, the plaintiff must prove the four traditional elements of negligence: "duty, breach, proximate cause, and damage or injury." Snyder v. Med. Serv. Corp., 35 P.3d 1158, 1163-64 (Wash. 2001). In addition, the plaintiff's emotional distress must be "manifested by objective symptoms [. . .] susceptible to medical diagnosis and proved through medical evidence." Haubry v.

1           Snow, 31 P.3d 1168, 1193 (Wash. Ct. App. 2001).

2           The Defendants argue that the Plaintiff's negligent infliction of 3 emotional distress claims should be dismissed for two reasons. First, 4 the Defendants argue that the negligent infliction of emotional 5 distress claim is duplicative of the Plaintiff's discrimination 6 claims. Second, the Defendants argue that the negligent infliction of 7 emotional distress claim is premised upon facts that are not 8 actionable in the state of Washington.

9           A. Duplication

10          The Court finds the Defendants' duplication argument no more 11 persuasive when it is applied to the Plaintiff's negligent infliction 12 of emotional distress claim. As with outrage, the Plaintiff's 13 negligent infliction of emotional distress claim is based upon the 14 Defendants' alleged failure to investigate other employees rather than 15 the Defendants' dismissal of the Plaintiff. Admittedly, the two sets 16 of facts underlying the Plaintiff's emotional distress claims and 17 discrimination claims are closely related. However, the Supreme Court 18 of Washington has held that a negligent infliction of emotional 19 distress claim is actionable despite being premised on facts closely 20 intertwined with those underlying a discrimination claim in the same 21 cause of action. See Chea v. Men's Warehouse, 85 Wash. App. 405, 407
 22 (Wash. Ct. App. 1997).

23           B. Negligent Investigation

24          A claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress may only be 25 premised on negligent investigation when the legislature has imposed a 26 duty to investigate upon the defendant by statute. Pettis v. State,

1 990 P.2d 453, 456-57 (Wash. Ct. App. 1999). Washington does not 2 recognize the tort of negligent investigation outside the context of 3 child abuse investigations. Donohue v. State, 142 P.3d 654, 667 n. 18
 4 (Wash. Ct. App. 2006). The Defendants accordingly had no general duty 5 to investigate under the common law. See Pettis, 990 P.2d at 457.

6 As the Defendants have argued, the Plaintiff's negligent
 7 infliction of emotional distress claim is not actionable. The sole 8 basis for the Plaintiff's negligent infliction of emotional distress 9 claim is the Defendants' alleged failure to properly investigate other 10 employees. Given that the Defendants had no duty to investigate their 11 other employees, the Plaintiff can not satisfy the first element of a 12 negligence claim. His infliction of emotional distress claim must 13 therefore be dismissed.

14 XI. LOST WAGES AS DAMAGES

15 The Defendants argue that the Plaintiff has no legal basis for 16 seeking lost wages as damages in this lawsuit. According to the 17 Defendants, it was the PAB and not WSU that ordered the Plaintiff's 18 demotion. The Plaintiff's failure to appeal the PAB's decision should 19 therefore preclude him from seeking lost wages from the Defendants.
 20 Laymon v. Wash. Dep't of Natural Res., 994 P.2d 232 (Wash. Ct. App.
 21 2000); Chelan County v. Nykreim, 52 P.3d 1 (Wash. 2002).

22 The Court is not persuaded by these arguments. In requesting lost 23 wages, the Plaintiff is challenging not the PAB's decision to demote 24 him, but the Defendants' failure to reinstate him following his 25 demotion. The Ninth Circuit has expressly recognized "discriminatory 26 failure to reinstate as a separately actionable claim" in the context of the Americans with Disabilities Act. Josephs v. Pac. Bell, 443 F.3d 1050, 1060 (9th Cir. 2006). The authority from other circuits upon which the Ninth Circuit relied in reaching this conclusion deals with failure to reinstate under Title VII. See EEOC v. City of Norfolk Police Dep't, 45 F.3d 80 (4th Cir. 1995); Samuels v. Raytheon Corp., 934 F.2d 388 (1st Cir. 1991). The Defendant's allegedly discriminatory failure to reinstate the Plaintiff thus appears to be actionable.

The cases cited by the Defendants are inapplicable to the present case. Both Laymon and Chelan County address the necessity of exhausting administrative remedies prior to challenging the actions of a government agency in court. Laymon, 994 P. 2d at 236; Chelan County, 52 P.3d at 17. The Defendants have not raised the issue of exhaustion of administrative remedies, and the Court declines to do so.

CONCLUSION

The Plaintiff's Title VII and Outrage claims may proceed to trial. All other claims shall be dismissed. The Court being fully advised,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED:

1. The Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment, Ct. Rec. 10, is GRANTED IN PART AND DENIED IN PART.

2. The Plaintiff's claim for Retaliation in violation of the Law Against Discrimination of the State of Washington, Wash. Rev. Code § 49.60.210 is DISMISSED.

3. The Plaintiff's second cause of action, Wrongful Discharge in Violation of Public Policy, is DISMISSED.

4. The Plaintiff's third cause of action, Negligent Retention and Supervision, is DISMISSED.

5. The Plaintiff's fourth cause of action, Emotional Distress, is
DISMISSED.

6. The Plaintiff's sixth cause of action, Deprivation of Civil Rights, brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, is DISMISSED.

7. The Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment, Ct. Rec. 10, is DENIED as to the Plaintiff's claim for Retaliation in violation of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3 et seq., and the Plaintiff's fifth cause of action, Outrage.

IT IS SO ORDERED. The District Court Executive is hereby directed to enter this order and furnish copies to counsel.

DATED this 3rd day of January, 2007.

s/ Fred Van Sickle
Fred Van Sickle
United States District Judge